Bolsen à la carte!

Designer and bagmaster Jonas Povel likes to stay on the ball. The Rugby World Cup is coming up and it isn't just rugby fans who like the look of leather ...

During last summer's World Cup, his bombolsa football bag commemorating Germany's World Cup victory in 1954 turned out to be a real bombshell. Now Monsieur Povel is getting ready for his next big coup with his rugby bags. Some will go for the rugbolsa in natural brown leather – all innocence and light – while others will prefer the blackbolsa, black as the darkest night. Either way, these designer bags will accompany their owners through thick and thin – protecting their treasures in the finest silk, guarding them with two stable zips and defending them with sturdy leather flaps. These beautifully worked designer pieces are hand-crafted from the finest premium-grade cowhide. And because they feature straps that can be attached in three different ways, rugbolsa and blackbolsa are the perfect accessory for both sexes: women will love them as an elegant clutch; men can sling them over their shoulders casually; and all bag lovers will appreciate the convenient rucksack style.

In addition to the exchangeable straps, the rugged character of these bags is especially evident in the signs of wear they develop over time – eloquent testimony to the action-packed lifestyles of their owners. The transfer fee for the rugby bags is 250 euros; they can be ordered from the designer himself:
